Old Common Gardens

Old Common Gardens consists of 49 apartments in two buildings each of two storeys surrounded by landscaped gardens and grounds with a parking forecourt at the entrance to the development.

Locks Heath and its neighbour Warsash are favoured residential districts close to the coast and with frontage to the River Hamble and access to countryside. The area is just south of the main A27 Southampton Road and there is both good local shopping and public transport to the larger centres of both Fareham and Southampton.

Locks Heath lies about a mile south of Swanwick and Junction 9 of the M27 bounded by Warsash and Titchfield to the south west and south east. It originally established itself as a community of market gardens and farms becoming famous for supplying much of the country with strawberries in the early part of the 20th century.

Southampton is a thriving city about six miles away with many beautiful parks and gardens, flourishing theatre, excellent shops and numerous places of interest. Today there are several museums in the city and many fine buildings. There are regular ferries to The Isle of Wight.

Further Afield

Locks Heath is surrounded by the earlier settlements of Swanwick and Titchfield. Titchfield is mentioned in Domesday as Ticefelle and had a mill, a market and a toll. Today it remains an attractive small town with a Saxon Church and the ruin of Place House, where Charles I spent his last night before imprisonment.
